JURY WOULD VISIT
SCENE OF MURDER

Might Reach Verdict, It Is Said—Judge Harper Refuses Request.

Tuesday afternoon the jury in the case of Fred Barnes, the negro barber tried for the murder of Albert Washington, another negro, sent for Judge Harper and requested that they be granted permission to visit the El Paso saloon where the killing occurred. However, their request was denied as this is not permissible under the law. If they had gone to the scene, the defence would have cause for a retrial of the case.

When the case of the city of El Paso against W. W. Wiley was on trial the jury was taken to the saloon which the city sought to remove from the middle of South Oregon street. The jury was immediately dismissed by Judge Harper and deputy sheriff H. G. Van Haselen was severely censured by the court for taking the jury to the scene.

The Barnes jury is still out and Wednesday morning it was reported to stand tight for conviction against four for acquittal.

Mrs. Werle is the wife of J. P. Werle, engine foreman on the Southwestern switch engine, and the boy is the son of J. A. Bordeaux, an insurance man who moved here recently from San Antonio.

The Werle family claims that Mrs. Werle was struck at the base of the brain by the boy while her back was turned. Mr. Bordeaux says that the boy was only resenting being sprinkled with water by one of the Werle children and in throwing a stone at the child, struck the mother by accident.

No arrests were made.
